Online resources for students

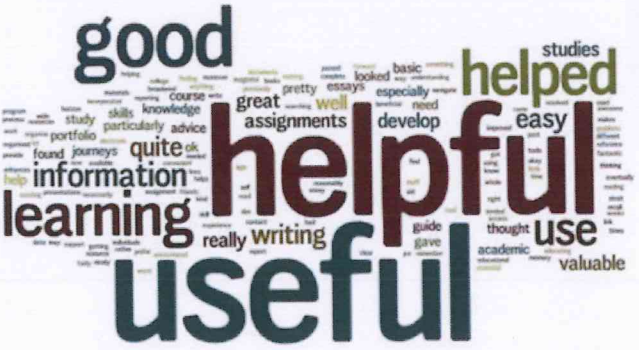
www.helpthestudents.com

The University of West London has received project funding from the JISC e-learning Embedding Benefits Programme. The project (FfiL) adds specialist materials in Feedback and Feed Forward to the ALLE (JISC, 2011) Learner Journey (http://hermes.uwl.ac.uk/learnerjourney), a collection of valuable online learning tools to help build academic skills. The purpose is to support and inform students of the variety of forms in which feedback comes, through the use of simple activities and explanations to enhance confidence and, develop future academic and professional performance.

Students with tutor support and guidance have designed and developed online resources that assist in understanding Feedback and how to use it.

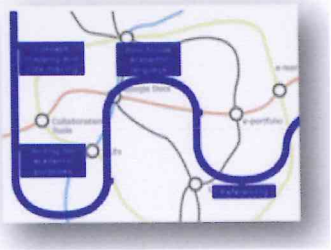
Students are leading the project WIKI (www.helpthestudents.com) and promoting engagement with the national student body to create an online learner community around digital literacies and feedback.

What other students have said about our materials:



Learner Resources

- What is Feedback/Feed Forward? Explains the basics of why feedback is needed and the variety of forms.
- What to do with feedback? Gives tips and explores common problems perceived by students.
- Highlighter Exercise. Introduces an exercise for creating self-feedback based on academic requirements.
- Academic principle marking grid. Provides a good base for understanding how to improve and understand requirements.
- FAQ's. Based on what students are asking on the project WIKI, this includes the most common questions with feedback.



For more information e-mail: lyn.greaves@uwl.ac.uk or joanne.driscoll@student.uwl.ac.uk

UNIVERSITY OF WEST LONDON

The Higher Education Academy

JISC